Man Thinks.

The suit for absolute divorce brought by Walter Lisenard Suydam Jr., the young Blue Point, L. I., millionaire, against his runaway wife, Louise Lawrence Suydam, was tried before Justice Clark in the Brooklyn Supreme Court to-day. The hearing lasted just twenty-two minutes.

At the conclusion of the taking of testimony the Court signified that he would grant an interlocutory decree after he had inspected the papers in the case and assured himself that they were regular. The decree will become final in ninety days.

The plaintiff and his elderly father, who is rated as ten times a millionaire, and who is one of the oldest and most aristocratic families of New York, were in court, the younger Suydam going upon the stand and making the formal statements necessary in an undefended action for divorce. Mrs. Suydam was not present, nor was she represented by counsel.

Before taking up the case Justice Clark commanded that every person who had brought a camera into the courtroom should instantly leave. He threatened that if any reporter remained in defiance of his order arrest and imprisonment would immediately follow.

OWNERS OF CAMERAS FLEE AT COURT ORDER.

About a dozen men and women, some of whom had brought cameras made up in the shape of books, hurriedly departed. Then the Court posted officers at both doors of the courtroom with instructions to enter with a camera.

A few minutes before this the plaintiff had come in with his father and his counsel, Joseph T. Loefer of Patchogue, L. I. Suydam Jr. is a tall, rather gangling young man with a scrubby mustache, high cheekbones and a serious expression. He sat with his father and his counsel in the jury box until Justice Clark called him to the stand.

Then he stated in a thin, hesitating voice that he had been married to the defendant on June 10, 1910; that they had lived happily together until June of this year and that he had not conceived of or condoned any of the acts of infidelity alleged in the complaint. That was all of the young millionaire's testimony.

He was followed on the stand by Miss Cecelia McMorro, a maid employed in his Blue Point villa. Miss McMorro testified that on the night of Aug. 22, when she had seen young Frederick William Noble, son of Plumber Noble of Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn, enter the Blue Point house and go into one of the drawing-rooms with Mrs. Suydam.

MAID SAW MAN IN MRS. SUYDAM'S BEDROOM.

Later, at 3 o'clock on the morning of Aug. 23, the witness had been awakened by the sound of voices in the hallway that led to Mrs. Suydam's bedroom. She had recognized the voices of her mistress and young Noble.

"I looked down into the hall," said the maid, "and saw Mrs. Suydam in her bedroom. She was undressing. She was not alone. A man was in the room with her. Presently the door was shut and locked and I saw the light go out."

Miss Mary O'Rourke, who was lady's maid for Mrs. Suydam, was the next witness called.

"I saw Mrs. Suydam about 3:30 o'clock on the morning of Aug. 23," said Miss O'Rourke. "A few minutes before I had seen her through the bedroom door I heard her voice and the voice of Frederick William Noble. I had seen them together coming up the stairs a little earlier. I heard them lock and close the door after they went in, and a few minutes later Frederick Noble came out and went downstairs. He remained downstairs a little while and then came

FLAGG AND AIDES
INDICTED; QUICK
TRIAL PROMISED

All Plead Not Guilty and Neely,
Peevish, Goes Back to Jail.

The Federal Grand Jury returned indictments this afternoon against Jared Flagg, Daniel Nash Morgan, former Treasurer of the United States; Alvin M. Higgins, a lawyer; P. Tennyson Neely, Edward L. Schiller, Rev. James T. Schock, Henry H. Jackson, Joshua Brown and Elbridge C. Sewall. The defendants are charged with using the United States mails in a scheme to defraud and with the common law offense of conspiracy to defraud.

All the defendants were in the Federal Building when the indictments were handed to Judge Hough. Including P. Tennyson Neely, who is the only member of the Flagg outfit arrested in Saturday's raid not on bail. Neely is quite peevish because Flagg has not got him out of the toms.

The nine defendants were arraigned before Judge Hough. They were represented by John F. McIntyre, Robert C. Beatty and Irving Burdick. All entered pleas of not guilty, with leave to withdraw or change or submit motions or demurrers on or before Oct. 9. The bail fixed at the time of arrest was continued in all cases. Neely asked that his bail be reduced and John F. McIntyre asked that Neely be released on parole in his custody. Both requests were refused by the Court.

SCHOOLBOY ARMY REVOLTS AGAINST TOO MUCH "LERNIN"

Bronx Insurgents March in Streets Demanding Shorter Hours.

BUT MEET PRINCIPAL.

He Applies a Birch Tree Switch and They Are Back in Their Places.

Seventy-five boys, ranging in age from nine to twelve, pupils in the annex of the Williamsbridge school, Oliveville avenue and Magenta street, the Bronx, went on a strike yesterday afternoon in a protest against what they termed "too much lernin'."

They played hooky and paraded the streets in the region of White Plains avenue for three hours, carrying banners on which were inscribed in big letters: "We want three hours schooling instead of five." Not until they attempted to invade the school building was their victorious march halted. There they found Principal Devlin armed with a large portion of a birch tree.

After a liberal application of the switch it is reported to-day that the boys are taking their meals off the mantelpiece and are ready and willing to take all the "lernin'" possible in a given five hours.

The strike is said to have had its origin in the fertile brain of the son of a baker named Castro. This fact has not been established, but many of the boy's friends say their leader is related to the notorious trouble maker of Venezuela fame. At any rate he proved himself an adept at organizing and recruiting his army of insurgents.

To each he whispered "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." His exhortations from a neighboring fence post found eager listeners. When the doors of the school were discovered after the noon recess it was opened after Gen. Castro's cause had so many supporters that in many of the class rooms there were vacant benches.

Mobilizing his army near the school building, the valiant general marched it up and down the street. Each waved a banner on which the slogan of the warriors was inscribed.

But he made a fatal mistake. Having conferred the outside world he set out to seize the child of his arch enemy, Principal Devlin.

"Woe is me," he cried to-day, caressing a loose portion of his trousers. Principal Devlin believes that birch trees and school books were invented at about the same time. So do Castro and some of his army.

Like his famous namesake, it is said, Castro is only waiting for a more favorable opportunity to start another revolution. The news has spread throughout the Bronx that he is receiving recruits and that he hopes within a few days to have an army as well organized that a second attempt will prove successful.

The school hours at present are from nine until twelve in the morning and from one until three in the afternoon. It is this afternoon session that has disrupted the school. With the championship baseball games coming on, to say nothing of the foot ball season, the boys say that it is beyond human endurance for them to spend the autumn afternoons within the walls of a school room.

The janitress of the tenement at No. 295 East Ninety-eighth street heard faint moans to-day from the rooms of the Kurlands on the third floor. She listened at the keyhole for a minute, then ran to the street and called Policeman Wey of the East One Hundred and Fourth street station.

Wey threw his shoulders against the door and broke the lock. In the room they found Goldie Kurland, nine years old, Mary, three years old, and Sam, the year-old baby, lying unconscious on the floor. There were a few crumbs of bread scattered near them.

Wey called Dr. Donnelly of Harlem Hospital and the janitress got a bottle of milk and a loaf of bread. Dr. Baker revived all three children and allowed them to have a little food.

"Mamma had a fight with papa Monday night," said Goldie, the first to be restored. "Papa hit mamma and went out and said he wouldn't come back. She was awful mad, and pretty soon she went out and said she was going to get even with him. She looked the door and we had to wait for her to come back. She didn't come, and there was a loaf of bread and we had that, but the baby couldn't eat much of it."

The children were put to bed in the hospital and the surgeons believe that by careful treatment the girls can be saved and turned over to the Children's Society. Little Sammy has not much chance.

Maxime a general police alarm has been sent out for John K. Kurland and his wife.

JOHNSON-WELLS FIGHT IN LONDON STOPPED BY COURT

Judge Says Battle Would Endanger the Licenses of Earl's Court.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The fight for the heavyweight championship of the world between Bombarde Wells, the English soldier, and Jack Johnson, the champion, was blocked to-day when Judge Bush issued an injunction against the promoters and the fighters. The Court held that the fight would endanger the license of Earl's Court, where it was to have been held, and acted on the application of the proprietor of that resort. A crowd of sporting men filled the Bow Street Police Court this afternoon for the hearing of Jack Johnson, Bombarde Wells, their managers and James White, the promoter of the prize fight scheduled for Oct. 2, who had been summoned on the complaint that they were planning to commit a breach of the peace. The action was instigated by the public prosecutor, following a decision of Home Secretary Churchill that the proposed contest would be illegal. The clergy and various organized bodies had protested against the holding of the event on moral grounds, while it was disapproved by the authorities because of the probable effect upon the colored subjects of Great Britain which the defeat of a white man by a colored man would have.

Regarded as a test case which might have a wide bearing on the future of pugilism in England, great interest was focused in the outcome. Prominent sportsmen had been retained. Richard D. Muir and Travers Humphreys, who prosecuted Dr. Crippen, the wife murderer, appeared for the Solicitor-General. Curtis Bennett represented Wells while Sir Forrest Fulton and Eustace Fulton looked after the interests of White. Frederick E. Smith, M. P., had been retained for the defense, but was absent.

Johnson disclaimed counsel and announced, "I appear for myself." The defense tried to obtain an adjournment, contending that insufficient time had been given them in which to prepare a case upon which the whole future of boxing depends. The Solicitor-General, Sir John Simon, represented that since 1911 in twenty-two heavy-weight championships the loser in fourteen had been so punished that he was unable to proceed. Johnson, he said, had knocked out the last three of his opponents. The hearing was adjourned until Friday to enable Frederick E. Smith to appear. A great crowd outside

ELEANORA SEARS STOPS RUNAWAY AT TENNIS MATCH

Intrepid Boston Girl Dashes at Horse, Which Swerves
From Spectators.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 27.—The successful effort of Miss Eleanor Sears of this city, to turn a runaway horse away from the seats whence a fashionable gallery was watching the matches, overshadowed interest in the play today in the third round of the annual women's lawn tennis tournament at the Longwood Cricket Club. The animal, attached to a delivery wagon, became frightened and broke the fence at one side of the courts. It headed direct for the crowd. Miss Sears, who was in the midst of her match with Miss Edith Rutch of Boston, ran from the court and jumped for the horse's bridle. She failed to grasp it, but her movements made the horse nervous from his course and return to the dash from between two trees, the animal freed itself from the harness and ran down the street, where it was captured shortly afterward.

Miss Sears calmly resumed play, losing her match after three hard sets, to Miss Edith Rutch of Boston. Miss Hazel Hattick of Berkeley, Cal., the national woman champion, won from Miss Hilda Williams of Boston, 6-6, 6-1.

FLIGHTS NEXT SUNDAY.

Woodruff Defies Bishop Burgess of Garden City.

(Special to The Evening World.)
NASSAU, BAHAMAS, Sept. 27.—Timothy Woodruff has sent a "dell" to Bishop Burgess of Garden City in which he states without mincing words that there will be aviation contests or exhibitions on Sunday. Bishop Burgess has been opposing Sunday aviation, claiming that it was in violation of the law, and furthermore, that the noise of the motors disturbed his congregation.

J. Upon his statement that the Steel Corporation was a legally organized concern and would not dissolve, the prices on the New York Stock Exchange took a big jump, with Steel leading.

HELLO GIRL WINS A RICH HUSBAND BY GOLDEN VOICE

William Eli Jessup Marries
Miss Myrtle Bell of Washington.

William Eli Jessup, forty-nine years old, a wealthy railroad engineer of Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, left the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel to-day on his honeymoon, following one of the quickest courtships and marriages on record. The bride was Miss Myrtle Bell, thirty-one years old, a telephone operator of Washington, D. C., a "girl with a golden voice," according to the happy bridegroom.

It was the "golden voice" of Miss Bell that first began to establish a credit about the rockeries of his heart. Much of Mr. Jessup's time was spent in Central America, where he has large railroad concessions. He made only occasional flying visits to Washington. It was while on these flying visits that Miss Bell handled his telephone calls. He never saw her till a few days ago. But the love germ had been gathering vigor for several years.

The millionaire widower had begun to establish an acquaintance by sending postcards from the various parts of the world. He got a few in reply. Then he took to writing letters and these also won replies. Photographs were exchanged and finally, when Mr. Jessup landed in Washington two weeks ago, he got Miss Bell on the wire and told her he was coming round to meet her. They met, looked into each other's eyes and loved, so the story goes.

Mr. Jessup and Miss Bell arrived in New York yesterday. Mr. Jessup engaged two suites in the Waldorf and Miss Bell occupied one while he occupied another. Late yesterday afternoon they went down to City Hall and got a marriage license and a few hours later they arrived back at the Waldorf and told the manager they had been married. They did not say by whom or where. The happy couple left the hotel this morning without revealing their destination.

Upon the statements made by the bears that nowhere in the Morgan statement did it appear that the Government had not prepared to attack the Trust, the early advance turned into a strong downward wave which, at the closing of the market, had wiped out all of the gains that followed the Morgan bull leadership and left many glaring losses in their places.

In the midst of the most terrific onslaught the bears have made during the past three years a report was circulated that the Wabash road was slated for a receivership. This report was officially denied at the offices of the road, and was found to be based upon the fact that a loan, secured by $200,000 of Wabash securities, had been called.

STOCKS DROP FROM THREE TO SEVEN POINTS IN RAID.

Favorite stocks, in the excitement of a raid that had three distinct periods, went off from three to seven points from their early morning figures. The Hill stocks, Rose, the new gold, and Copper ranged from four to five points loss. There came a checking of the raid shortly before the close, but it still left many of the standard issues from one to three points under the closing prices of the day before. In these low prices were some new low records.

George J. Gould issued a personal statement on Wabash. He said:

"There is no truth, absolutely none, in the statement that the Wabash road will be forced into the hands of a receiver. The road has no pressing financial difficulties and if it had I would supply the funds to meet it." The first raid on the newly born bull movement came fifteen minutes after the opening, when 10,000 shares of Steel were thrown into the market. Then followed a second raid about the noon hour, with a third disturbance starting about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The market closed with net losses ranging from 1 to 3 points and losses from the high point of the day from 1 to 6 1/2 points.

The total stock sales for the day were 1,300,000 shares.

It was known that Morgan was personally behind the bull movement. His great influence was felt from the starting of the day. It was, therefore, a giant's battle that developed later on, as excited brokers had thronged the floor for a fight for blood, and the bear element, with a third disturbance starting about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The market closed with net losses ranging from 1 to 3 points and losses from the high point of the day from 1 to 6 1/2 points.

STEEL DROPS 4 POINTS AFTER TAKING 5-POINT JUMP.

Scalpers, out for a short profit, took advantage of the early rise to pick off their gains, swelling the total of the first two hours trading to $60,000 shares. The harvest aided the bear side to develop weakness and the opening gains were either eliminated altogether or reduced to nominal proportions. Union Pacific went back 1 1/2 points to a level lower than yesterday's close. Steel, which had led the upward movement,
